

Employee Engagement Surveys

Go Beyond Measuring Satisfaction

Employee surveys are a launch point for engagement. Your employee surveys should generate activation and engagement at every part of the journey – involve your organization from the very beginning.

Today's typical employee engagement surveys are rooted in employee satisfaction – essentially asking, "how happy are you with your work environment?" Stop treating your employees as consumers and start engaging them as co-creators of your organization's future.

Employee Satisfaction:

extent to which employees are happy or content with their jobs and work environment.

Employee Engagement:

extent to which employees feel passionate about their jobs, are committed to the organization, and put discretionary effort into their work.

Employee engagement surveys are more than a point-in-time measure. They are a first step in engaging your employee's as co-creators. That's why what you ask, how you ask it, and what you do with the data matters.

Keys to a Great Employee Engagement Survey

From the survey planning and invitation email to data collection and action planning – everything should reflect the culture you are trying to create. Treat employees as part of the solution and not as a passive consumer of their job. Engage your organization from the very beginning and invite them to be a part of the future you want to build.

We leverage these key success factors when we partner with you to create a great employee survey:

- Identify and align on goals and desired outcomes
- Design surveys that generate meaningful data about culture, strategic alignment, leadership, and execution
- Build a transparent and authentic communication campaign to increase survey participation, share results, translate your survey findings, and reinforce your team's commitment to action
- Facilitate root-cause analysis through focus groups and one-on-one interviews with your key stakeholders when a deeper level of understanding is needed
- Develop organization-wide and team-specific priorities that will have the most significant impact on engagement in the months ahead
- Partner with your leaders to develop action plans that clearly define priorities, accountability, and next steps
- Synthesize and analyze results to define themes and identify key indicators for what's working well in your organization and what needs more attention
